Kolhapur, located in southwest Maharashtra on the banks of the Panchganga River, is a historic city known as "Dakshin Kashi". Famed for the ancient Mahalaxmi Temple, traditional Kolhapuri chappals (leather sandals), spicy cuisine (Pandhara-Tambada Rassa), and vibrant wrestling culture, it is a bustling, industrialized city nestled in the Sahyadri mountains.

Ambabai Mandir

A 7th-century spiritual icon built. It is one of three and half Shakti Peethas, featuring Hemadpanti architecture. A unique architectural phenomenon called Kiranotsav occurs here, where the sun's rays fall directly on the idol's feet.

Panhala Fort

New Palace Museum

this "Fort of Snakes" is famed for its zigzag shape & historic connection to Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj, who escaped from here during the Adilshahi blockade. It is the largest fort in the Deccan region and serves as a misty hill station with panoramic valley views.

Built in 1881 by British architect Charles Mant, this Indo-Saracenic palace is the current residence of the Kolhapur Maharaja. The ground floor museum houses a vast collection of royal artifacts, including weaponry, stuffed wild animals, and a magnificent Darbar Hall with stained-glass windows.

Kaneri Math Siddhagiri

Khasbag Wrestling Stadium

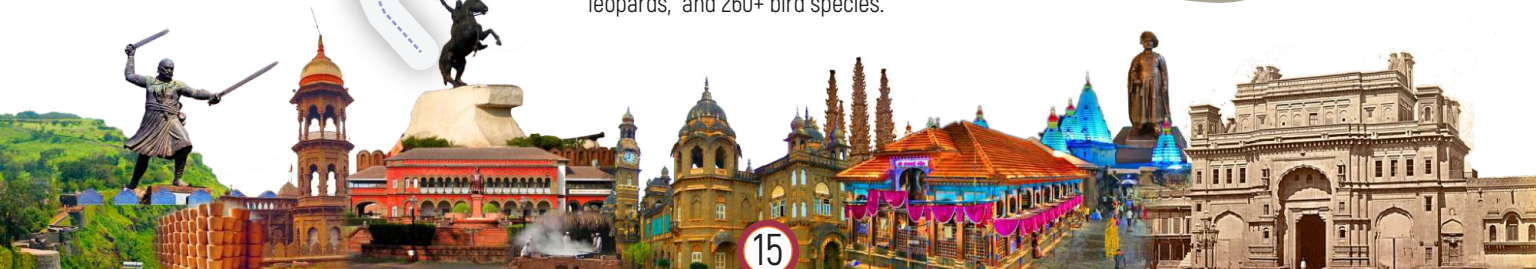

A 7-acre museum that depicts ancient Indian village life through over 3,000 realistic wax and cement statues. The campus also features a massive 42-foot Shiva idol, a 125-foot deep well, and a serene old Shiva temple.

India's largest open-air wrestling stadium, built during the reign of Rajarshi Shahu Maharaj. It features a central wrestling ring (Houd) and can accommodate approximately 30,000 spectators to witness traditional Kushti matches.

Radhanagari Wildlife Sanctuary

Established in 1958, Radhanagari Wildlife Sanctuary in Kolhapur district is Maharashtra's first wildlife sanctuary and a UNESCO World Heritage Site in the Western Ghats. Spanning 351.16 sq km, it is famous as a "Bison Sanctuary" protecting the Indian Gaur, alongside tigers, leopards, and 260+ bird species.
